District Attorney Swann also received information yesterday alleging that three contributions, amounting to more than $220,000, had been used by the Mitchel Fusion committees and no mention of it was made in the official report filed in Albany. It was learned that the prosecutor's information was to the effect that two of these contributions were more than $100,000 each and that they were taken in by one man and turned over to several prominent borough heads for disbursement.

"I have no confirmation of this, and I won't discuss it at all," said Mr. Swann, when pressed for additional information about the alleged transactions.

"What will be done about the cor-poration contributions?" he was asked, "That will be attended to later," he Samuel Lewisohn, treasurer of the Samuel Lewisohn, treasurer of the main Fusion committee, has been asked to appear before Assistant District Attorney Black to-day with the books and vouchers for inspection. "Have you discovered any evidence that any political reporters were receiving money from the Mitchel committee." Mr. Swann was asked.
"I haven't gone into the identity of any of the recipients of the fund yet, but I shall do se before the investigation is completed," he replied.
Assistant District Attorney Black said comparisons would be made between the ledger accounts prepared by Auditor Buckley and those presented by Trensurer Lewisohn. He added that if the campaign officials were as frank with him as they have been thus far there would be no necessity for conducting a John Doe investigation before a committing magistrate.
